

THE GAZETTE.

MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 28

SHIPPING OF THE WORLD.—A table has been compiled by the New York Bulletin, from authentic sources, showing the number of vessels owned by each country at the close of last year, compared with that registered under each flag in 1870. The Americans, in 1870, maintained 7,025, with a tonnage of 2,400,607. In 1874 the number of American vessels was 8,689; tonnage 2,181,659. The British had, in 1870, 23,165 vessels and 6,993,153 tonnage; in 1874, 20,538 vessels and 6,383,763 tonnage. Great Britain lost during the period under review 2,627 vessels, while the American exhibit shows a falling off of only 156. The total number of vessels of all countries for 1870 is put down at 59,918; tonnage, 16,042,498; and for 1874, 56,289 vessels and 14,523,630 tonnage, showing a decrease in all of 3,629 vessels.

This is said to be the origin of the "Printer's Devil." Aldus Manutius was a printer in Venice. He owned a negro boy who helped him in his office, and some people were superstitious enough to believe him an emissary of Satan. He was known over the city as the "little black devil." Desiring to satisfy the curiosity of the populace, he one day publicly exhibited his boy and proclaimed, "I, Aldus Manutius, printer to the Holy Church and Pope, have this day made public exposure of the 'printer's devil.' All who think he is not flesh and blood come and pinch him."

How to make glass that is not brittle, recently discovered for the second time, was discovered for the first time when Tibertus was Roman Emperor, as reported by Pliny; but Tibertus feared the invention would deprive gold and silver of their value, and, having learned that the inventor was the sole depository of the secret, he caused him to be decapitated.
